DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

SATURDAY EVENING, DEC. 10, 1881.

Our esteemed contemporary the Republican is still chewing the bitter cud.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company own one thousand locomotives, ten thousand passenger coaches and fifty thousand freight cars.

The Senate has passed a bill to extend to Mrs. Garfield the free use of the mails of the United States. This is a privilege which was also extended by congress to the widows of Abraham Lincoln and Ex-President Polk.

Every town in the country is taking preventive measures against small-pox. Why is not something done by our board of health? One single case would throw the entire community into a panic, and everybody would want to be vaccinated at once.

We agree with the Republican in its suggestion that Maysville ought to give special attention to "specialties." Our specialty is a daily newspaper. The town has already two good dailies, and there is plenty of room for more. It would be better for the town if there were "thirty more just like them." Then the town would gain a wide celebrity that would be business to an unlimited extent.

Should like to ask the Carlisle Mercury if it is supporting in the race for Public Printer a candidate who has no intention of elected, of doing the work of the office, but merely seeks it for the purpose of selling out to some one who is prepared to discharge the duties of the place? If it is, it has a right to take exception to what we have said on the subject. But if its candidate is making the race in good faith and is prepared with financial means to properly do the work there is nothing in the BULLETIN's article that it can justly complain of. It is not the men who are making a bona fide race for the place, and expect to do the work if elected, that we criticise, but the speculators who seek to get it in order to pocket a few thousand dollars by selling it out. We repeat that it is little better than black mail, and any man who engages in such business ought to meet with the severest condemnation of the honest people of the commonwealth.

Says the New York Sun: Recent developments at Washington do not encourage any one to hope that a party which has been twenty years in power is capable of reforming itself, or of correcting the abuses which have crept into the government under its administration.

The treasury investigation has come to nothing. When the trail got warm about the doors of influential and powerful men the hunt was called off, and it is not likely to be renewed.

The Star Route people are having it all their own way. Instead of being prosecuted, punished, and compelled to disgorge their plunder, they are considering what penalty they shall inflict upon those who presumed to investigate and expose them. They are strong party men and they are high party men. They "put up" enormously from the gains of their criminal business in last year's election, and they hold secrets and possess power which may not be lightly encountered.

The first Republican congress since 1874 has assembled; and what do we see there? The lobby, which disappeared under Randall, is gathering again in grand force, and will soon make itself felt as in the halcyon days of Grant.

But when is the reform within the party to begin.

Death of John W. Forney.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—Col. John W. Forney the veteran journalist, died at three o'clock this morning.

Horrible Calamity at Vienna.

VIENNA, December 9th.—A fire in the Ring theater broke out Thursday night just as the curtain ascended on the opera. There were upwards of 2,000 persons in the audience when the flames burst around the stage on which were 200 performers, and a tremendous rush was made for all parts of the house in order to escape. Many of the panic stricken people leaped from the windows, while the shouts and shrieks of those who were unable to make their escape were heartrending.

During the greatest excitement the gas meter connected with the theatre exploded thereby causing total darkness. Five hundred bodies have already been recovered and more are supposed to be in the burning building. The corpses recovered were little more than charred fragments.
